Tony Hicks Granted Parole with Support of the Tariq Khamisa Foundation

At the first parole hearing for Tony Hicks, Azim Khamisa and his daughter, Tasreen, did what few other victim’s families have ever done- plea for the release of the person who killed their beloved son and brother, Tariq Khamisa.

In the wake of the murder, Azim Khamisa founded the Tariq Khamisa Foundation (TKF) and reached out to Tony’s grandfather, Ples Felix, in the spirit of forgiveness. Both families and the Foundation have pledged their support for Hicks, including a role working with the Foundation.

The parole hearing took place at the California Men’s Colony at San Luis Obispo, where Hicks has been serving his sentence for the last two years.

After serving 23 years of incarceration in California’s prisons for the 1995 murder, Tony Hicks, now 38, was found suitable for parole.

“We are thrilled. Tony has worked hard for this. He earned it,” said Azim Khamisa.

“Now, we have the opportunity to bring Tony into the Foundation. Because he can tell his powerful story firsthand, he will save the lives of thousands of children,” said Khamisa. “We urge the governor to approve his release.”
“TKF’s Restorative Workshops are unlike anything out there. Truly phenomenal! Life changing for kids and the adults working with them.”

– Tammy Cook, National School Partner

“The Tariq Khamisa Foundation is dedicated to creating safer schools and communities for youth as well as setting them on a path towards opportunity and success. The programs and curricula provided by the Tariq Khamisa Foundation promotes hope for those vulnerable to violence, crime, and poverty. I thank you for your contributions as a community leader in helping to protect and promote a healthier San Diego.”

– San Diego Mayor Kevin Faulconer

In February

TKF supported Helix Charter High School with presentations and circles following several school incidents. In September we returned with teacher trainings and student curriculum to further support the campus with restorative based services.

In March

TKF trained its first school team to facilitate our Restorative Workshop Curriculum. TKF trained 8 counselors and teachers at Newtown Elementary School located in Newtown, PA. The school launched its facilitation in October with 200 5th and 6th grade students.

In late March TKF presented a workshop on Teaching Students Restorative Principles at the 2019 National Deeper Learning Conference hosted by High Tech Graduate School of Education, San Diego.

In June

TKF attended the Greater Good Science Center at UC Berkeley grantee convening. TKF was selected as a grantee to develop and implement a research-based parenting program to teach families restorative principles. The new program will launch in 2019.

In September

TKF trained teachers from multiple school sites in Sweetwater School District, who began facilitating TKF’s curriculum in 2019.

In October

TKF presented at the 2018 International Restorative Practices Conference hosted in Detroit, MI. Our workshop was on the healing value of forgiveness as a restorative principle.

In November

TKF presented at the regional Rocky Mountain Restorative Conference in Colorado Spring, CO. Our workshop was on the importance of teaching students restorative principles.

In December

TKF entered in a partnership with the San Diego County District Attorney’s Office to strategize on strengthening mentoring programs for high-risk children.

Thank you for your support!
Dear TKF Family,

2018 was transformative on so many levels as we witnessed the strong need in our country for healing and forgiveness. TKF is committed to being restorative in the way we live our lives and the way we engage with both young and old. Our belief in peacemaking, forgiveness and restorative justice was visible to the entire country as we advocated for the release of Tony Hicks at his first parole hearing on November 28th. Our advocacy served as an example that, if we fill our young people with love and compassion and give them the tools and support they need to succeed, they will become warriors of peace who are change makers for the greater good. I look forward to working alongside Tony Hicks (my soul brother) in the name of my beloved brother, Tariq Khamisa.

The demand for our programs continues to grow. To address this need, TKF has launched a 5-year expansion plan to support the development of the TKF Training Institute, which will allow us to expand our services and impact more children both in San Diego and beyond. As we enter our 24th year, we have become experts in training educators to implement programs rooted in accountability, compassion, forgiveness, and peacemaking in their own schools.

We have raised our voice in the restorative movement, joining national conversations around breaking the school-to-prison pipeline and replacing schools’ punitive, dated practices with restorative principles.

We do this in the name of our children - all of our children - as they are our hope and future and we must give them the tools they need to deal with conflict, challenges, anger and pain in a healthy way.

We can’t do this work alone, and we are immensely grateful for the support from our growing TKF family. Your belief and commitment in TKF inspires us to continue to advocate for our children, to support our educators and parents, and collaborate with our community to create a safer and more peaceful world.

In Peace,
Tasreen Khamisa
